MESSAGE FROM OUR PRINCIPAL

Photographs and Social Media

Parents may face devastating consequences by posting seemingly innocent photographs of their children on social media.

As per a recent alert from Cliff Dekker Hofmeyr, parents are warned that they should be far more aware of the legal implications associated with posting pictures of their children on social media.

South African parents are the legal guardians of their children until they are adults. Parents therefore have the responsibility to protect their children's privacy and security and must ensure that no harm is caused to their children, even if such harm may only result in the future.

The complete article is available on the Cliff Dekker Hofmeyr's website, cliffedekkerhofmyer.com
